ARRIVAL OF CHIPPEWA CHIEFS .- The Chicago Tribune announces the arrival in that have ever been friendly to the whites, and are loyal to the Government. The party consists of six Chiefs of the Lake Superior Chippewas, whose leadquarters are at Bayfield, Wisconsin, in route for Washington by permission of the President, their Great Father. They are in charge of Gen. L. E. Webb, the genial Indian Agent, and are accompanied by B. G. Armstrong, interpreter for the Indians, and Joseph Gurnoe, interpreter for the Government. The names of the delegates, who are all Chiefs, are as follows: Antoine, The Buffalo; Naw-gaw-nah, The Foremost Sitter; Aw-monse, The Little Bee; Au-ke-wen-zee, The Old Man; A-daw-we-go-zhig, On Both Sides the Sky; Keesh-ke-taw-wag, The Cut Ear; O-be-gwod, The Side; Me-zhe-naw-wag, The Messenger. These Chiefs, with their polysyllabic but characteristic and descriptive names, are on their way to Washington for an interview with their Great Father, relative to an amendment of their treaty with the United States, by which they may gain permanent possession of the lands they occupy for themselves and their children, without any reservations. They are fine specimens of men physically and rank high in intelligence.

Messrs. Ellis, Button, and Eaton, of Springfield, Vermont, make the following novel proposition to the President through the columns of the papers:

We will purchase, at any reasonable price for eash, 40,000 acres of the cotton lands in possession of the Government at Port Royal, and agree to employ 10,000 emancipated negroes to work thereon during the coming year, and pay them wages at the rate of $1.25 cents per day for each able hand, and a proportionate sum for those of an inferior grade; payable weekly, either in cash or necessary articles of clothing and provisions, at cost prices; and will, on the first day of January in each year ensuing, sell to the negroes any amount of these lands that they desire to purchase and have the means to pay for, from half an acre upward, at cost price, and will treat them in every respect, while in our em-ployment, as agricultural laborers in New England are treated.

As the planting season is at hand, an immediate answer to this will be required to enable as to go on with the undertaking.

PRAIRIE GROVE—AN INCIDENT.—A most thrilling incident of the late terriole fight at Prairie Grove is thus related by Lieut. Will. S. Brooks, of the 19th Iowa volunteers. Writing to a friend in this city he says:

"The fight was most determined and the slaughter immense. I was struck at 4 o'clock P. M., while we were being driven back from a too for advanced position. We were out. slaughter immense. I was struck at 4 o'clock P. M., while we were being driven back from a too far advanced position. We were outstanked and had to run 300 yards over open ground and exposed to a murderous fire from the right, left, and centre, or rear; here we lost Lieut. Col. McFarland. We lost one-half our regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and, in company D, more than the four regiment, and the four regiment has been caused in Great Salt Lake City (Utah Territory), by the message lately sent to the legislature by Governor Harding. The Governor, with a courage that does him great credit, finding upon intercourse with the people a great lack of sympathy with the Government in its present struggle with rebellion, pointedly rebukes in his message our regiment, and, in company D, more than hair our effective men. I was hit at the commence ment of the retreat, and was near being mence ment of the retreat, and was near being captured, as I could not run. When more than half way to our battery the color sergeant fell, and I received the colors. The pursuing rebel Colorel shouted: "Godd—m them, take their colors!" This enraged me, and I hallooed back, "You can't do it." The cowardly rascals did not care to close on me, but let go a volley which left nine boles in the flag and eighteen in my clothes! Four bullets passed through the cuff of my shirt sleeve, but they could not wound the hand that held the old flag."—Peoria (Ill.) Transcript.

THE REBEL SECRETARY OF THE NAVY IN HOT WATER.—In the advertising columns of the Richmond Whig we find a long communication, signed "Amicus," which reflects severely on S. R. Mallory, the rebel Secretary of the Navy, for his conduct in a certain courtthe Navy, for his conduct in a certain court-martial case, in which Dr. Garnet, formerly of the United States navy, was accused of some breach of navy discipline, and for conduct unbecoming in an officer and a gentleman. The Secretary of the Navy convened a court, consisting of Commodore Hollins, Captains Sterrett and Chatard, Lieutenants Commanding Spottswood and Barney, Surgeons W. Sinclair and James F. Harrison, and other Sinclair and James F. Harrison, and other officers, who, after a long session, honorably acquitted Dr. Garnet. The Secretary of the May, not being satisfied with the finding of the court, ordered it to sit again and try Dr. G. over again. This they did, and brought in the same verdict. Mr. Mallory then, in a special order, rebuked the court for finding such a verdict; and Dr. Garnet's friends, in return, pay their compliments to the Secretary of the Navy, through the columns of the daily papers.

THE HON. THORNTON F. MARSHALL'S RESOLUons .- The following resolutions were introluced in the Kentucky Senate on the 28th nst., and referred to the Committee on Fede-

Resolved by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky,

1. That although this Commonwealth has been engaged in aiding the Federal Government to suppress armed rebellion against its authority, it is our duty, by every legitimate means, to keep the President of the United States, in all his acts, within the limits of the Constitution if we would preserve for our-Constitution, if we would preserve for our-elves and our posterity the blessings secured to us by our admirable system of government, tate and Federal.

2. That the Federal Government is one of mited and delegated powers; and all powers of granted to it by the Constitution, nor probited by the Constitution to the States, are eserved to the States respectively, or to the scales, are eserved to the States respectively, or to the scople. Any claims of power on the part of aid Government, which infringes upon the vell-defined guards of constitutional liberty, on, and almost as dangerous in its tenden-ies, for one department of the Government to afringe upon the province, and assume the owers delegated to another department, as it is to assume powers that have never passed from the people to the Government.

3. That we view with apprehension and clarm the claim set up by the President of the alarm the claim set up by the President of the United States, by his proclamation, under an assumed war power, or "military necessity," to change the domestic relations of communities, and repeal laws guaranteeing the rights of property in whole States and districts, whether that property belongs to the loyal or disloyal, the combatant or non-combatant. As this alleged power is limited only by the will and discretion of him who exercises it, there is no conceivable form of outrage upon individual rights or public interest that cannot be perpetrated under it. All legitimate war power is subordinate to the Constitution. Any other doctrine would give to one man, in time of war, power co-extensive with his will, time of war, power co-extensive with his will, or, in other words, despotic power, would yield to the Executive alone, what, by the Constitution, Congress, and the Executive combined cannot do. Kentucky cannot give her countenance and support to a doctrine so ab-horrent to the true friends of the Government of the United States, who desire its perpetui-ty and the perpetuity of the Union; and we hereby solemnly protest against its execution, hereby solemnly protest against its execution, in the name of a sovereign State,

4. That to make emancipation the object of the war would be not only to violate the Constitution, but to use the treasure and blood of this country to carry out political views, the dread of the execution of which, to a great extent, produced the war; would be in bad faith to the nation, and especially to those who have freely given of their wealth, and voluntarily offered their lives to the Government, after that Government had, of its own ment, after that Government had, of its own accord, put on record the solemn declaration that the war was not to be prosecuted for the purpose of overthrowing the established institutions of the States. Moreover, the sudden liberation of millions of negro slaves, without property without homes without education liberation of millions of negro slaves, without property, without homes without education, industry or enterprise sufficient to provide for themselves, cannot benefit either the black or the white man. 8. That Kentucky, ever loyal to the Constitution and the Union, does not look to secession as a remedy for any of the evils of which she so justly complains, but devoted now, as ever, to the perpetuation of the "Constitution as it is, and the Union as it was," will not despair of the Republic as long as that motto forms, as it does new, the rallying-cry of a large majority of the millions of American freemen of the North. At the same time, she anxiously desires a speedy settlement of the anxiously desires a speedy settlement of the unnatural strife which has so long been pending between those who should be brethren; and, to that end, would hail theearliest dawning of a spirit of concession and compromise, and, if necessary, the declaration of an armistice by the belligerents at the first moment negotiation becomes practicable.

To this end they have gallantly battled, and many nobly died. We are proud, as Kentuckians, of their reputation and valor, and tender our thanks to the survivors, and heartfelt sympathy to the friends and relatives of those who have

A SPECK OF TROUBLE IN UTAH.-Considthis indifference to the national welfare, telling the people plainly that their first great duty is loyalty to the Administration. A RACE BETWEEN STEAM AND ELECTRICITY A RACE BETWEEN STEAM AND ELECTRICITY.
Old Wash. S— is known by almost every railroad engineer, at least by reputation. A hetter engineer 1 never knew. But Wash.
had one failing—he would drink; and, if he was particularly elated with any good fortune, he was sure to get full of whisky; and though in that state never known to transgress the in that state never known to transgress the rules of the road by running on another train's time, still he showed the spirit which train's time, still he showed the spirit which controlled him by running at a terrible rate of speed. At one time the company purchased a couple of engines for the E—— road, on which Wash. was running. These engines were very large, and were intended to be very fast, being put up on seven-foot wheels.

From the circumstance of their being planked between the spokes of their "drivers," that is, having a piece of plank set in between the spokes, the "boys" used to call them the "plank-roads." They were tried, and though generally considered capable of making "fast time" under favorable circumstances, they didn't suit that road; so they were condemned to the "gravel-pit," until they could receive o the "gravel-pit," until they could receive n overhauling, and be "cut down" a foot or wo. Wash. had always considered that these ngines were much abused, and had never acceived fair treatment; so he obtained perission of the superintendent to take one of At it he went, giving the engine a thorough werhauling, fixing her valves for the express urpose of running fast, and making many lterations in minor portions of her machine-y. At last he had the job completed, and pook her out on the road. took her out on the road. After running one or two trips on freight trains to smooth her brasses, and try her working, he was "chalked" for the fastest train on the road, the B express. The "boys" on the road were anx ous for the result, for it was expected that "Old Wash." and the "plank-roader" would "astonish the natives" that trip.

Wash. imbibed rather freely, and was somewhat under the influence of liquor when the leaving time of his train came, though not enough to be noticed; but as minute after minute passed, and the train with which it connected did not make its appearance, Wash. who kept drinking all the time, grew tighter who kept drinking all the time, grew tighter an hour and a half "behind time," Wash. was pretty comfortably drunk; so much so that some of the men who had to go on the train with him looked rather "skeery,' for they knew they might expect to be "towed" as fast as the engine could run. How fast the train promised a near approach to flying.

At last they started, and I freely confess that never took as fast a ride in my life. (Wash. was nad a sast a fide in my file. (wash, had got me to fire for him). Keeping time was out of the question as far as I was concerned, for I had my hands full to keep the "fire-box" full and hold my hat on. We had not un more than ten miles, before the brakemar ordered by the conductor, put on the brakes, in peding our speed somewhat, but not stoppin peding our speed somewhat, but not stopping us, for we were on a heavy down grade, and Wash. had her "wide open," and working steam at full stroke. At last the conductor came over and begged Wash. not to run so fast, for the passengers were half scared out of their senses. Wash. simply pointed to the directions to use all "due exertion" to make up rections to use all "due exertion" to make up time, and never shut off a bit. So on we flew to B—, 40 miles from where we started, and the first stopping place for the train.

Here the conductor came to Wash again and told him if he did not run slower the passengers were going to leave. Wash said "Let them leave," and gave no promises. Some of them did leave, so also did one of the brakemen, and the baggage-man; away we went without them to O—, where a meswe went without them to O—, where a message from head-quarters was awaiting us, telling them to take Wash, from the engine and t another man on in his place. I told him the message, and picking up his coat, he go off and staggered to a bench on the stoop of the depot, where he laid down, seemingly to sleep. I started back to the engine, but Wash called after me, and asked me "how we go the orders to take him off?" I told him "by telegraph." "Humph," said he, rolling over "wish I had known that, the confounded de spatch never should have passed me!'-Trip

n the Life of a Locomotive Engineer. MAJOR-GENERAL JOSEPH HOOKER. - The new commander of the Army of the Potomac s a native of Massachusetts, and was born at old Hadley, in 1816, being now forty-seven years old. He entered West Point in 1833, years old. He entered West Point in 1833, his appointment being charged to that State. In 1837 he received his appointment of Second Lieutenant of artillery. In February, 1838, he was appointed Assistant Commissary of Subsistence, and promoted to a First Lieutenancy. From July to October, 1841, he acted as Adjutant at the Military Academy, and from 1841 to 1845 he ranked as Regimental Adjutant. When the war with Maxico broke out he was appointed Aide-de-Camp to Gen Hamer, and displayed so much gallantry that he was breveted as Captain. He particularly distinguished himself at Monterey. In the early part of 1847 he was made Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of Captain. For his sagacity and courage at the National Bridge, he was breveted Major, and soon after, at Chapultepec, rendered himself so conspicuous that he was breveted Lieutenant-Colonel. The war ended, he withdrew from the service and emigrated to California, where he engaged in commerce, with but moderate success.

At the breaking out of the rebellion he considered that the education he had received at and immediately offered his services to the Government, who, aware of his abilities, appointed him Brigadier-General of volunteers, on the 17th of April, 1861. He was placed in command of a brigade, which formed part of the Army of the Potomac. Subsequently he was put at the head of a division and sta-tioned in South Maryland, where he remained till February last. He was now placed in command of the fighting division par excellence of the army, including Sickles' splendid Excelsior Brigade, and at Williamsburg, Seven Pines, and Fair Oaks showed how worthy ne was of that proud position. He next dis-inguished himself during the seven days' contest, and afterward under General Pope before Washington, and under McClellan Maryland. He fought bravely at South Mou was wounded in the foot. When he had recovered from his wound sufficiently to take the field in a litter, he did so, and was made Commanding General of the 5th army corps On the 14th of November, 1862, he was placed in command of the centre grand division of General Burnside's army in Virginia. His promotions have thus taken place: On July 4, 1862, he was promoted to a Major-General-ship of volunteers, and on the 20th of September, 1862, was appointed a Brigadier-Gen

Secretary Seward on the subject of supplying the French in Mexico(with provisions and munitions. The telegraph supplies the following synopsis of the correspondence:

"The Mexican Minister, Senor Romero, in the first letter, asks the Government to pre-vent contraband shipments purchased by the emissaries of the commander of the French ted States.

"Mr.Seward replies, referring the Minister to a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, from which it appears that no intervention with the mission of the French officers is contemplated by the Treasury Department—a decision in conformity with precedents and with the rules of international law governing the case. Citations from Hamilton Webster and case. Citations from Hamilton, Webster, and Executive documents are given. Senor Ro Executive documents are given. Senor Romero expresses pain and surprise at such decision acquiesced in by the Secretary of State. He quotes Vattel, not to teach to Government of the United States, but to give his opinion of the impropriety of allowing either belligerent to provide itself with means of warfare in a neutral nation, and reviews the cases cited by Mr. Seward. He refers to the alleged shipping of the provisions by merchants of New York to the French army near Vera Cruz, and to his calling the attention of Mr. Seward to those facts, who replied that the United States did not recognize a state of war existing be-did not recognize a state of war existing be-tween Mexico and the allies, as there had been no declaration of war, and therefore the United States could not be governed in their conduct by the rules of neutrals.

"He further stated that subsequently he made Mexican blockaded port; that the Secreta first appeared ready to grantit, but on lear hat the number was 36,000, he thought se. And he was compelled to believe ished, when wagons and mules were bought here for the French army, to find that what was denied to Mexico was freely given to France. Mr. Seward replied that the prohibition of the shipment of arms was general, applying to all nations, on the ground of the of wagons, either for France or Mexico. The Victory at Arkansas Post.—On the 12th, Gen. McClernand issued a congratulatory order to his troops over the victory at Arkansas Post. He says: "Within seven days you have sailed two hundred and fifty miles, from Vicksburg to this post, borne upon numerous transports, from time to time furnished with fuel cut by you from the forest. With ranks thinned by former battles and diseases, you have waded and cut your way through miles of swamps and timber in advancing to the attack. LIVER LUCAS, Local Editor & Reporter. MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1863.

There is evidently a disposition on the part of the conservative Legislatures of the North to confer with the Legislature of Kentucky and with each other respecting the cor lition of public affairs. In our judgment, this by the Legislature of Kentucky. Our judgment in the case is founded on several considerations which appear to us sound and impor-

What in this emergency is the chief function of the conservative Legislatures with respect to public affairs? There are but two great modes at once lawful and peaceable by which society can act for its own correction. One of these is legislation; the other is public opinion. And by the word legislation we here mean not simply the making of laws but all legislative action whatever. The conservatives of our country, in their endeavor to correct the present administration of the government, must act through one or the other of these two tutional resort; and the resolution bespeaks a wisdom not unequal to the occasion. We have before us, therefore, only the two modes of legislation and of public opinion. Legislation, under our system, is either state or national. The latter as a public corrective we may safely entrust to the Congress elect. We all await its action with hope. The former has indeed but an indirect and partial bearing on the administration of the general nate influence upon such administration may be salutary in a high degree. This influence can be exerted through legislation proper, through the faculty of appointment, or through declarations of sentiment or of doctrine. The chief use of legislative action in the last-mentioned form is to shape and vitalize public opinion. And it is chiefly in this form that the corrective action of the State Legislatures must be cast in the present emergency. Neither legislation proper nor the siderable sphere for the action of State Legislatures in relation to national affairs. spangled, almost invisible, threads of Beauty? The latter is in the several Legislawhile the former in its extremest constitu tional reach is unable effectually to touch the mark. It thus remains chiefly for the conservative Legislatures so to wield legislative action as to energize public opinion and direct it as effectually as possible to the correction of the evils of the administration. Such in this emergency is the chief function of the conservative Legislatures with respect to pubmost effectually? Shall the several Legistures in discharging this function co-operate or shall they work separately without the means of conference or understanding? I they work separately, they may not work to the same end, or, if they concur in the end, their action will be apt to prov less wise and comprehensive, to strike the public mind more feebly, and to exert a much fainter influence, than if the result were the expression of the judgment of the same bodies acting in concert with each other. On the other hand, we do not perceive, after a careful survey of the matter, any untoward consequences which are likely to spring from such concerted action. Quite the contrary. The concert would be thoroughly constitu tional in spirit as well as in letter; it would serve to promote discreet and enlightened acion; and it, would impart to the action such aditional and peculiar force that the wholesome effect might be felt presently in all branches of the public service and through the whole framework of the government. It would ten to calm and at the same time to make effective that public opinion which for the lack of a just and definite and authentic expression i low greatly in danger either of wasting itsel in empty words or of breaking out into revolutionary demonstrations. It would not only at once restrain and invigorate public opinion but highly utilize it. A spring-tide of popular feeling, raised by the perilous excesses of the faction in power, is overflowing the land, and, if a safe and lawful channel is not seasonably cut for the flood, it may do a great deal of damage and no good at all, whereas the timely cutting of such a channel would not merely deprive the raging torrent of the power for evil but would convert it into a mighty agent for good. The separate and random action of the conservative Legislatures would not suffice to cut such a channel; their joint action undoubtedly would.

tion of this kind is not taken, the grave perils which threaten us, if they should come, would find us in a condition of general distraction not knowing where to begin or what to do We should be caught in a state of total unpreparedness, without so much as our wits bout us. Certainly this is no time for such utter supineness. It is a time, if there was ever one, for the highest energy and vigilance, empered by the ripest wisdom. The excosses of the faction in power, which have already brought us near the verge of ruin, are not yet ended, and we know not what excess may be committed next. The tendency o these excesses, if they are not checked or their influence is not counteracted, is to disorganize our army, and suddenly to put the nation at the mercy of the rebels. Besides, the opinion is beginning to prevail, that, if the rebelion is not suppressed in the course of the next two or three months, the faction in power will abandon the cause of the country, invite foreign mediation, and attempt to conclude a ing them. This stanza appeared in his first eace on the basis of a dissolution of the Union. This infamous attempt, if made, and the resolution to make it is virtually declared by the leading organ of the faction in power could not fail to awaken the wildest excitemen among all true patriots, and, if not met with the change should have been made we cannot rudence as well as with promptitude and irmness, would immediately throw the nation into a state of fearful anarchy. Dangers, the little conceit "April's earliest-born"—sweet not certain indeed but probable, thicken on in itself but as easy to sacrifice as a spring every side. We are near the verge of ruin, chicken. We had supposed that no genuine and the faction that has dragged us there is bard (always excepting the military troubastill dragging us forward. Manifestly, this is dour of "Long time ago," and the present no time to be folding our arms in inaction, or to Home Journal) would be willingly guilty of be treading mechanically the common path of action. It behooves us to be looking around us, to be recognizing the true friends of the country and our own true friends, to be cultivating their acquaintance, to be conferring with them to be injuring with them in a solid property of the country and our own true friends, to be cultivating their acquaintance, to be conferring with them to be injuring with them in a solid property of the country and our own true friends, to be cultivating their acquaintance, to be conferring with them in a solid property of the country and our own true friends, to be cultivating their acquaintance, to be conferring with them in a solid property of the country and our own true friends, to be cultivating their acquaintance, to be conferring with them in a solid property of the form the purpose of taking the cath of office required by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

not despondent, but proudly and confidently hopeful. Because we are thus hopeful, however, we are not blind to the thronging perils which beset the country, nor would we conceal them from the public, if we could. The safety of the country lies mainly in the clear perception of these perils by her true sons, and in their preparation, whilst endeavoring vigorously to lessen the perils which exist, manfully to grapple with whatever perils that may hereafter arise. Our especial desire in what we have here said is to promote this condition of things within the sphere of the conservative Legislatures. We consider that in this emergency the chief function of the conservative Legislatures touching national affairs is to hape and vitalize public opinion; that unless this function is discharged effectually public pinion as a corrective agency is in very rious danger of becoming powerless or worse than powerless; and that this function can be lischarged most effectually by the concerted action of the several Legislatures. We are, therefore, in favor of such action; and we ope, that, if our Legislature is not already n correspondence with the conservative Legisatures of the North, a committee for the ourpose will be appointed, and a correspon-

We remember Mr. Aldrich's first book-one tures exhausted already or else paral- likes often to forget his own first book, but, if Commission Merchants e progresses from it, it becomes-however rude and imperfect-an interesting landmark. We saw "The Bells" in 1854-5, and knew that a oung poet was folded anonymous in the "T. B. A." of the title page—for a season only. It had the finger-prints of genius between the leaves, and afterwards when "Babie Bell and other Poems" appeared, this impression was not changed; the peculiar color, tone, and life of words-indistinctly indicated in the former nameless volume-were here clearly defined, listinct, and vivid-characteristics which had become their author's own acknowledged roperty. "Poems of a Year," published only a 1861, came into the world, when the Nort was a great training-camp, glittering with ayonets marching southward: the only exuse poetry could have for appearing at such ime was that of the flowers and stars which look into each other's faces even on battle fields. The Blue and Gold book we have in nand is a grouping of the two former volume with some new poems now first under cover The volume is divided into several parts "Cloth of Gold," "Swallow Flights," "Babie Bell," etc. Each of these divisions holds many lelicious things, dances of words around fairy entres of music, exquisite, and miniature ars of honey from Mount Hybla, and Is the happy poet's food. Mr. Aldrich's forte lies, to our judgment n those delicate and scintillant jewels which have made him so well known and opular already at home (for we understand that he is among the few of our native poets whose works "sell"), but in this volume there are several pieces in blank verse which indicate that he is equal to the solid masonry o words as well as the more frost-like architec ure of Fairyland. One of these, "Pythago as," is a classic poem, and in it the poet ha ndeavored to bring home to the reader the old Pythagorean doctrine of transmigration:

t has much stately strength and Doric gran-Of the poems as a whole, turning over the entire book for their titles and forgetting the crystal doors which divide the volume, we ike best "The Unforgiven," "Piscataqua River," "The Crescent and the Cross," "The Robin," "The Faded Violet," "Haunted, 'Madam as you pass us by," "The Tragedy, 'After the Rain," "May," and "Miracles 'Piscataqua River' is a birthday poem, which as the phrase is, "sings itself" with a dreamy onging music, a yearning for the fresh life o boyhood and the remembered scenery of boy ood; we know of no poem which expresse this feeling more truly and more exquisitely it has the very tone of longing. We quote THE FADED VIOLET. What thought is folded in thy leaves!

What tender thought, what speechless pain!
I hold thy faded lips to mins,
Thou darling of the April rain!

That found thee when thy dewy mouth Was purpled as with stains of wine—For love of her who love forgot.

I hold thy faded lips to mine!

That thou shouldst live when I am dead, When hate is dead, for me, and wrong, For this, I use my subtlest art— For this, I fold thee in my song.

This poem is the very incarnation of a regret and is very beautiful and tender; but the third stanza suggests to us that Mr. Aldrich does not always improve his poems by amendacknowledged volume as follows:

Of something wilted like thy leaves, Of fragrance flown, of beauty dim: Yet for, the love of those white hands That found thee by a river's brim—which, at least, was good in its rhyme. Why see, for the forced rhyme of "gone" (or gorn to "born" (or "bawn") was hardly repaid by

Let me write my songs to-day,
Rhymes with dulcet closes—
Four-line epics one might hide
In the hearts of roses.

"Painpinca" is a shadowy, vague poem-" drama of Italy," very subtly woven-one o Mr. Aldrich's best productions, we think. We shall conclude this imperfect notice and these inadequate quotations (which only as single flowers indicate the garden from which they came) with the following:

Sick of myself and all that keeps the light of heaven away from me and mins, I seek This bare, bleak hill, and on its highest peak Lingering, watch the coming of the night. Tis ever a new miracle to me. Men look to God for some mysterious sign, For marriago-feasts with water turn'd to wine. For Christ to walk upon the troubled sea: As if he did not to the sense unfold His meanings as miraculous as of old! Come watch with me the shaft of light that glows In yonder West: the fair, frail palaces, The fading Alps and archipelagoos, And great cloud-continents of sunset-seas.

[Correspondence of the Louisville Journal.] OUR FRANKFORT LETTER.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 31. The secessionists held another secret caucus in the Senate Chamber last night. One of the pages of the House of Representatives was present part of the time. A young man asked him if he was a secessionist. The page replied, "No; are you?" "Yes, and none but secessionists are allowed here." The page heard others say that all but secessionists would have to leave the Senate Chamber. It is a mercy that they permit the Legislature to hold its at they permit the Legislature to hold its I see that some wiseacre telegraphs that the

I see that some wiseacre telegraphs that the House of Representatives instructed Kentucky soldiers not to enforce the President's proclamation, by a vote of 69 to 15. On the contrary, the proposition was rejected as unconstitutional by this vote.

In the Senate, the bill to repeal the law reviving each of teachers to take an oathniring school teachers to take an oath-riginally reported by the Judiciary, and re-erred to the Committee on Revised Statutes came up, being reported against by the latter Committee. After some discussion, the report of the Committee was sustained. The Senate passed a bill to-day relieving certain. Sheriffs who have been robbed by rebels. Among others, the Sheriff of Logan county, of a sum exceeding six thousand dollars, which was taken by Gen. Henry E. Reed, who acted as commissioner of the Provisional Government at the time. This bill elicited much disment at the time. This bill elicited much dis-cussion. The Finance Committee, who re-corted it, were unanimous for it. Through their able chairman, Mr. DeHaven, the committee announced that they had adopted this rule to govern them in all such cases, viz: Where an officer of the Commonwealth entrusted with public funds had used extraording the commonwealth of the commonwealth entrusted with public funds had used extraording of the commonwealth of th hary diligence for the preservation of the ieve them, where such funds had been forci-wrested from them by an armed force. ey also stated that more cases would be ore them, amounting to more than twenty ousand dollars, and they wanted the Sena thousand dollars, and they wanted the Senate to decide upon the correctness of the principle, for they intended to be guided by the action of the Senate. Mr. Goodloe, from that committee, made an able speech in support of the bill, saying that he was guided in his course by the rule of action before enumerated. After full discussion, the bill was passed by 25 yeas to 6 nays.

The Senate also passed a bill appropriating

35,000 to the Western Lunatic Asylum. Mr. DeHaven introduced a resolution in structing the military committee to inquire into the expediency of raising a State force to assist in carrying out our State laws, and in protecting our citizens in their rights. It vas adopted.

The House of Representatives' call of the counties was had, and of course nothing but coal business was transacted.

the work is four times as large as he designed it to be, costing him two dollars a copy, which is one dollar more than the price at which he engaged to furnish it to subscribers. For this unexpected difference between the cost and the stipulated price, which he believes is more than compensated by the increased value of the work, and into which he has been betrayed by his zeal for our institutions, he throws himself upon the justice and generosity of his subscribers. We trust the appeal will not be in vain.

We should say, in justice to the au

of a careful inspection.

TERRIBLE AFFAIR .- A little girl, daughter of a gentleman named Hartman, who resides on Preston street, near Kentucky, was shot and mortally wounded about five o'clock last evening by a boy sixteen years of age, named John Breener. The youth had been flourishing the pistol about, snapping it at some boys. The boys ran away, and the youth pointed the pistol at a number of girls who were playing near by. Unfortunately the pistol was discharged, the load penetrating the back of the little girl's head and escaping above the right eye, inflicting a mortal wound. This little girl was at the time, in company with some companions, celebrating in a simple manner her tenth birthday. Breener was placed in jail by Officer Chas, Juno. The young man has no parents living. He is, we believe, an employe in one of the tobacco factories of the city.

We are pained to learn that a charge has been extensively circulated in this city to his lecture is the rebellion in East Tennessee the effect that the watch taken from the person of Frank Tryon, after his death, by the rebel surgeon Scott, and forwarded to his family here, was abstracted from the body of Col Foreman on the battle-field. It is but justice to the deceased and to his family to say that this charge is wholly incorrect. The watch sent to the family has been recognized by his former associates in the American Express Company, and also identified by John Kitts & Co. with the one purchased by Tryon from that house some two years prior to his entering the Confederate service.

ANOTHER REBEL OUTRAGE.-It will be remembered that, during Bragg's stay in Kentucky, a bogus copy of the Louisville Journal was issued, with which they deluded their rebel followers. Bragg has been playing the same game upon our friend Mercer, of the Nashville Union, having issued a bogus edi tion of his paper, which is well filled with misrepresentations. The paper contains "startling intelligence from the Northwest," in which it is represented that Kentucky, Missouri, and Illinois have seceded from the "old Government." Col. John M. Harlan arrived in the city last Friday night. Col. Harlan, as our readers know, has been nominated by the President for the office of Brigadier-General. Of course the nomination will be confirmed. Certainly a promotion was never more richly merited. And yet, since merit is not always rewarded in this neglectful world, we congratulate our gallant young townsman on his good

It will be seen that some important changes are made this morning in our Bank Note List. The notes of the Kentucky banks are quoted at 21/2@3 P cent premium, the notes of the Canada banks at 40 $ cent premium, and the notes of the three old banks of Tennessee at 1 to 11/2 discount. The bankers are buying gold at 55 to 56 $\psi$ cent premium.

REBEL PRISONERS .- Thirty-five rebel prisoners, captured in Christian county, Ky', by Col. Foster's scouts, were brought up on the Star Grey Eagle for confinement in the military prison in this city. They arrived on Saturday.

Daniel Harry, who stole a horse from Wm. Huncetman, of this city, and was arrested at Lebanon, Ky., has been tried in New Albany and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years.

"Our excursion to Pompeii was performed by railway, and occupied about an hour from Naples. On reaching the Pompeii station, a short walk brings us to the ruined city, which, short walk brings us to the ruined city, which, contrary to general expectation, is found to be at an elevation above the level of the adjoining country. Destroyed in the first century, it was not till about 1750, that any one gave a thought concerning it, and this neglect appears the more surprising, when we are told that part of several buildings remained prominent above the soil, having never been thoroughly entombed. An accidental discovery of painted remains having suggested a regular course of excavation, the process of opening up has been going on for upwards of a century, but under great difficulties as to the disposal of the incumbent earth.

opening up has been going on for upwards of a century, but under great difficulties as to the disposal of the incumbent earth.

"Proceeding up a winding and sloping pathway, cut through masses of rubbish, we come with startling abruptness on the silent and deserted city. A Government officer is imposed on us as a guide at the entrance, and, led by him, we suddenly find ourselves in a paved street environed by shattered walls, doorways, temples, and columns. Walking onwards, we make the circuit of the town as far as it is opened up. Going down one street and up another, crossing this way and that way, we are amazed at the extent which has been laid bare, though a much larger space remains to be cleared. While there was much to surprise and delight—much to instruct and moralize over—I feel a reluctance to impose any account of what has been so often and so minutely described. A mere glance at the more remarkable features of the exhumed city will suffice.

"The guide, having drawn attention to the Adjoining are the ruins of the prisons, in which skeletons in manacles were found. At a short distance is the ruin of the theatre, with some handsome columns still standing The houses of distinguished individuals are also made the subject of special notice; such as of Sallust, Pansa, and the villa of Diomedes of an apartment about the size of a coach-house, the front having been entirely open, or house, the front having been entirely open, or with a counter partially running across. At night, all had been closed in with shutters. I do not think there had been any shop windows. Some of the shops seem to have had one or two small apartments behind or above. In several instances the stone-cutters are seen, with large earthenware jars as fixtures. A baker's oven, with remains of a grinding mill, are shown in one of the shops; and from the baker's oven, with remains of a grinding mill, are shown in one of the shops; and from the skeleton of an ass having been found in a recess of this establishment, it is conjectured that the mill had been moved by that unfortudent that business was conducted in a primi-tive sort of way in Pomreii—the grinding of grain into flour, and the baking and selling of preed baying as instance, taken bread having, as just seen, taken place all in one establishment. Till the present day, as I have already mentioned, things are little ad-vanced beyond this in Rome. In some invanced beyond this in Rome. In some instances, we see the name of traders on the front of their shops, inscribed in Roman letters in so rough a style as to suggest that they had been executed unprofessionally with a stick or brush. Few buildings are believed to have been more than two stories in height. Generally, nothing remains above the first story, and accordingly the city looks like a collection of short stumps of walls, which, for their preservation, are covered with tiles. In their entire state, the houses had flat roofs, a circumstance which hastened their destruction. On being excavated, skeletons were found in several houses, but not in great numbers; for, as noticed by the younger Pliny in his account of the destruction of the city, the inhabitants generally fled to a distance for safety, many of them trying to shelter themselves many of them trying to shelter themselves fruitful sources of our industry.

"The streets are narrow, and paved with huge stones in the old Roman style; in some places they are much worn with wheels, and most irregular. Water had been brought into the town by subterranean conduits, which emptied into large stone troughs at the corner cannot be looked upon with indifference." emptied into large stone troughs at the corner of certain streets; and from these public fountains dwellings were supplied by water-carriers. There are back lanes in some of the streets, but no stables have yet been discovered. Possibly, horses were accommodated in the suburbs. One is pleased to see that the streets had trottoirs, a very curious fact, for it is only lately that side pavements for foot passengers have come into use on the continent, seemingly introduced from England. The forming of trottoirs had, therefore, become a lost art in Italy, for in few towns are those useful appendages to a street yet employed. The trottoirs of Pompeii are about thirty inches wide, and raised a foot above the street; in some instances they are laid with a common kind of mosaic. Corresponding with them in height, there are usually three fixed stepping stones at the ends of the streets. It showers that temporarily deluged the streets, and it was therefore necessary to have means of crossing dry-shod. As wheel carriages and it was therefore necessary to have means of crossing dry-shod. As wheel carriages were employed, it must have required dexterity in drivers to pilot their cattle and vehicles through the spaces between the stepping stones. "The most perfect of all the public buildings laid bare is the amphitheatre, which is situated so far apart from the other exceptions."

ted so far apart from the other excavations that we cross a field to reach it. The field lies above the still unexplored portions of the city, and it is here that those excavations are being actively carried out, of which notice has lately been taken by the press—a number of men digging out the earth, which was carried away by women and girls in baskets, and deposited in trucks. These were run off in the usual manner, and emptied at a distance, forming a railway embankment in the direction of Vesuvius. By this improved process or removal, the excavations may be expected to go on rapidly. It is to be regretted, however, that the embankment crosses over the space which remains to be cleared out, and will have in turn

"We spent altogether about six hours in our ramble over Pompeii; and, having concluded by dining at the Hotel Diomede (a house of eutertainment for tourists, a short way from the railroad station), we got pleasantly back to Naples by one of the evening trains." An Aristocratic Ancestor of Gen. Mc-Clellan.—In Burke's "Vicissitudes of Fami-

McClellan, Lord Kirkcudbright recorded his at the general election. adbright, recorded his at the general election. Despite, however, of his lordly character, the poor peer followed the humble occupation of a over, and for many years used to stand in a lobby of the Assembly rooms in the old town, selling gloves to the gay frequenters of the ball, for, according to the fashion of the time, a new pair was required every fresh dance. The only occasion on which he ab-sented himself from his post was at the ball following the election of a representative peer; then, and then only, did he doff his pron, and, assuming the garb of a gentleman rest of the year. The glover lord's son, un-mindful of the pristine glories of his race, en-tered upon a more ambitious career than his father, attained the rank of Colonel in the army, and, not satisfied with anything short of legal recognition, submitted his peerage claim to the House of Lords, by whose decision he was declared seventh Lord Kirkcudbright, on as of Sallust, Pansa, and the villa of Diomedes in a suburban street, outside the walls. In these and similar mansions of the patrician order are noticed some remains of mosaics and frescoes, the greater part of such decorations having been removed, along with other objects of art, to the museum at Naples. The whole city has, in fact, been cleared of every movable; and almost every place is as bare as in a house after a removal.

"The larger mansions have undoubtedly been magnificent, and in their successive courts we see the type of the modern Italian palazzo and French hotel. These superior dwellings extend considerably backward from the street, the access to them being generally by an entrance between the shops of tradesmen. All the shops are of those limited dimensions which are still common in Naples, Rome, and other Italian cities. They consist of an apartment about the size of a coach-house, the front having been entirely conen. ments.

Some of them ad-mitted that they were deserters, while others say they were stragglers who had been cap-tured. [From the Army and Navy Reporter.] THE NAVY-THE SEA-SOING QUALITIES OF OUR MONITORS PROVED.—There was much anxiety felt in naval circles in this city yesterday to hear from the iron-clads Nahant and Weehawken, which left here on Sunday. The suspense was relieved by the receipt of a telegram from Captain Rodgers of the Weehawken, informing us of his safe arrival. From information received from enother source it is information received from another source it is probable that the Nahant and Lackawanna ave sheltered themselves behind the Delaware Breakwater. It will be seen that the Wee-hawken proved her seaworthiness by successfully weathering one of the severest gales on record. The importance of this experience is inestimable, and the thanks of the country are due to Captain Rodgers for having overcome the prejudices of the sailors, and for having the courage thus to test the only question which remained to be proved—the sea-going qualities of our Monitors. Verily, this is an important event, and its influence on our foreign relations cannot but be beneficial.
